

Wisconsin Leads Every State In Creamery Butter Production

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Madison, Wis., Dec. 15.—Wisconsin makes more creamery butter than any other state in the union, according to a report on the Wisconsin butter situation issued today by the Department of Agricultural Economics, University of Wisconsin. The farmer, according to the report, gets 67.7 per cent of the amount the public pays for butter.

Figures showing the amount of butter manufactured in this state every year since 1850 show that since that year the production of butter has multiplied nearly 44 times. In 1850, the amount produced was 3,633,750 pounds. In 1910 the amount was 161,925,193. In 1900 the amount was 106,552,649.

Here's how the report shows the money the consumer pays for his pound of butter is split:

	Cents	P. C.
Farmer	23.33	67.7
Freight	1.50	4.3
Factory	2.33	6.3
Wholesale	8.0	2.3
Storage	.18	.5
Shrinkage	.23	.7
Commission	1.75	5.0
Refriger. Jobber, Broker	1.00	2.9
Packaging	1.00	2.9
Retailer	3.43	9.3
Total	34.55	100.0

When the first statistics of butter production were taken in 1849 by the federal census, Wisconsin ranked twenty-second in the list of states; in 1859 she ranked eighth and held the same rank for two succeeding decades; in 1889 she ranked sixth; in 1899 fourth and in 1909 first, in considering Wisconsin as a butter producing state, it must not be forgotten that while she was attaining first rank she was also reaching the same position in the production of cheese, besides contributing much milk to the city trade and the condensaries.

The last survey of the state, in November, 1914, showed there were 884 creameries. Of that number 456 were found to be privately owned, 329 to be co-operatively owned and the remaining 48 have been closed, burned down, moved away or turned into cheese factories.

Statistics gathered from 184 creameries showed that the average cost of making a pound of butter is 2.33 cents. These figures agree exactly with results obtained by the Iowa dairy commissioners showing that 2 1/2 cents is a very close approximation to the actual cost of making a pound of creamery butter.

Creamery patrons purchase 1,216,460 pounds of butter from 146 patrons, 8 creameries, reporting an average of 8,332 pounds from each factory. This is a very small proportion of the butter made by each creamery, the usual output being close to 200,000 pounds a year. Thus creamery patrons purchase only about 4 per cent of the butter annually manufactured, the range in the amount of such sales, however, large, running from 50 to 35,000 pounds. Out of 146 creameries 60 sell from 5,000 pounds each to patrons, 4 sell 5,000 each, 41 sell 4,000 each, 10,000 to 35,000 pounds each.

One hundred and sixteen creameries sell an aggregate of 3,441,981 pounds of butter each year. This is an average of 29,671 pounds for each creamery, or somewhat less than 15 per cent of the usual creamery output for the year. One hundred and forty-two creameries sell from 5,000 to 40,000 pounds of butter to points in Wisconsin and ten other states. This is an average of 182,763 pounds for each creamery.

One hundred and ninety creameries designated their markets for 34,383, 893 pounds of butter. These are located in Wisconsin, nine other states and the District of Columbia, in order of importance as follows: Illinois, Pennsylvania, New York, Michigan, Massachusetts, Missouri, the District of Columbia, Maryland, Minnesota and Ohio. By far the most important markets are Chicago, Philadelphia, New York and Boston. These four markets take about two-thirds of the annual output of Wisconsin creameries and of these Chicago is by far the greatest, taking about one-half of the butter output of the state.

The dairy butter industry of Wisconsin is rapidly increasing, as is shown by comparing 27,000,000 pounds in 1909 with the 24,000,000 produced on farms in 1899—a decrease of nearly 27 per cent. About two-fifths of the butter made on the farm is consumed there, as is shown by the fact that 16,000,000 out of the 27,000,000 pounds made were sold in 1899, leaving 11,000,000 to be consumed on the farm. Butter received by Wisconsin farmers for dairy butter were: winter, 30.3 cents; spring, 27.7 cents; summer, 25.5 cents; fall, 25.7.

WEDDED YEARS AFTER CHILDHOOD ROMANCE

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Monroe, Wis., Dec. 15.—The story of the love affair of John Goetz, prominent merchant tailor of this city, and Mrs. Delphi Turner, of Leola, South Dakota, which has just terminated in their marriage, would make a novel plot for a movie.

John Goetz and Delphi Johnson were classmates together in Monroe thirty years ago when he wore knickerbockers and she pinafores, and they early plighted their troth. But before the day had come that John could raise a mustache, or Delphi donned hoopskirts, the parents of the young woman decided to try their fortunes in the west. The young people pleaded that they should not be separated, but the parents on both sides agreed they were too young to marry, and miles were placed between them. Finally they lost track of each other, and John, who had continued to make his home in Monroe, married and raised a family. Likewise, Delphi who had been taken to South Dakota by her parents, met with favor in the eyes of a young rancher and they were married.

Three years ago John was widowed, and soon afterwards the local press announced the death of the husband of she who had been Delphi Johnson. John was among the old friends in Monroe who sent her a letter of condolence, at the same time telling of his own bereavement. A correspondence resulted, and soon the letters were passing daily, there being at first many memories to the past which had been revived, and later a new interest, the spar kof love started in childhood days quickly fanning into flames.

One letter John wrote asked if Delphi still remembered the ring he had given her at parting when she moved west. In reply he was told that during all of the years since that time it had been treasured and had never lost its significance. The result was the ring was called into use on Thursday when the two were married, and at present they are at Leola, S. D., where the bride is the owner of a large ranch. Both have children by their first marriage, and to the childhood friendship has been an engagement with a young woman here with whom he had been keeping company for some time. Although a breach of promise suit followed, the case was settled out of court.

Woods Dual-Power Car

Gasoline and Electric Combined!

The Woods Dual-Power combines Gasoline and Electricity in a marvelous two-power automobile — An Electric in simplicity, elegance, convenience; a Gasoline Car in speed and unlimited mileage.

Dual-Power is an Electric that charges its own battery while the car is running, thus eliminating entirely the cost of current — it is a gasoline car of unfailing power.

You can run the car on electricity alone, you can run on gasoline power alone, you can use both together.

There is no clutch pedal, no shifting levers, no transmission gears. Power is applied directly from the gasoline motor and the electric motor through the propeller shaft to the wheels.

The car is started electrically, it brakes electrically, and speed is controlled electrically. The gas engine is non-stalling, the electricity is never exhausted.

All operations are controlled by two small finger levers on the steering wheel which start, stop and control speed; or these levers may be set at speed desired, and a single foot pedal will start, stop, accelerate, retard, brake and reverse—all with the utmost ease and simplicity.

Dual-Power has a quick, easy get-away. The magnetic brake will slow the car down without danger of skidding and the mechanical brake stops like a shot when necessary.

The phenomenal ease of driving is a feature that attracts all car owners, gasoline or electric, men and women. It offers the driver a chance to enjoy the motor trip, allows women to drive a powerful car without muscular effort.

Dual-Power is a car of the greatest economy because it generates its own electricity, because of its slight consumption of gasoline and its low cost of maintenance. It touches the very bottom of power economy and will interest you from the dollars and cents standpoint.

It combines the advantages of the Electric and the Gas Car—it is efficient, economical, simple.

It has unlimited mileage, will travel the roughest roads and climb the steepest hills. It is an ideal car for country trips or city use, an all-family, all-year-round automobile for every purpose.

And it is beautiful, roomy, easy riding. It is the most luxurious four-passenger enclosed car that can be built. The elegance of its appearance will make it distinctive in any crowd.

It is a car that any woman can drive and it's a smart, powerful car for a man.

It is a wonderful car—a triumph of automobile engineering.

Dual-Power combines the simplicity and luxuriousness of the Electric with the speed and unlimited mileage of the Gas Car and is more economical than either of them.

You should ride the Dual-Power yourself to appreciate its wonderful performance. You may choose your own roads and specify your own tests.

THE SCHOOLS AGAIN.

By this time the real situation as to the Janesville public schools is thoroughly understood by the citizens generally. They appreciate that the school buildings of the city are not adequate to meet the modern day demands made upon them, that something, something radical, should be done for the betterment of conditions. The time for action is always when the question is uppermost in the minds of the public.

The schools are not overcrowded because students from the rural districts attend. These students practically pay their own way in shape of tuition, but they are crowded because the city of Janesville is growing, has grown materially, since the buildings were erected. These outside students come to Janesville at the invitation of the citizens. They come because Janesville is the county seat, the ideal place for them to come to complete their education.

It is a pretty small mind that would raise this question after all the efforts that are being made to bring the residents of Rock county into close touch with Janesville and Janesville institutions. It is merely evading the question. Putting off until tomorrow, the problem that should be settled today. The needs for a reformation of the Janesville school system are apparent. If anyone doubts that the buildings need attention let them go to the basements of some of the older schools and see if they would keep their horses or their cattle there under the sanitary conditions that exist.

Perhaps the school board is not to blame entirely, although the burden lies upon their shoulders. It may be possible that under our commission form of government the mayor and councilmen should take a more active interest in the matter. It might be a good thing to suggest to these officials that they listen to the popular demand for bettering of the schools and providing more sanitary and more modern structures.

The saving of money is a wonderful gift, but saving it at the expense of some individual part, the most important cog in the civic wheels of machinery—the schools—is poor economy. It is a penny saved and a pound lost, as the old saying goes. Superior talent must show the members of the Twilight club that it would be a saving to centralize the educational interests of the city in the expenses now incurred of conducting many smaller schools with heat, light and janitor expenses.

Why not have a survey of the local schools made so that the public might know just what was the matter and how to remedy it? Why not take time by the forelock and start an investigation to see if the statements made by the speakers at the Twilight club on Tuesday were correct in their premises and if the results be obtained by a radical change would be beneficial.

There is no use going to work in the dark if changes are to be made. That they are needed is apparent to the people interested in school work. To the rest of the public it is merely hearsay evidence. Let us be certain of what we want before erecting a new high school building, transforming the present building into a general grade school for the upper classes and the abandonment of certain present ward schools and the cutting off of the expense their maintenance entails before we go further.

THE BIG INCOME.

The most obvious result of the war munition and supply business is the great increase in wealth of a comparatively small number of people. The income tax returns show that the number of incomes between $50,000 and $500,000 has doubled during the past year. The receipts from incomes of $20,000 to $50,000 have increased fifty per cent.

New evidences of luxury are to be seen on every hand. All over the country great lavish hotels are filled to overflowing. The food and lodging may not be much superior, but the stamp of style is found everywhere from the sky parlor to the bootblack. The most expensive motor cars are selling more freely than ever before. Millions of money are being made and a new race of multi-millionaires is fast forming.

What are all these newly rich people going to do with their money? They will build palaces by the sea and in the mountains, hewing roads out of rock and creating great monuments to the superfluity. It will all employ a great deal of labor, excellent fixtures, and make it difficult for ordinary people to get work done. But all the money will find its way eventually into the hands of the common people.

The new rich man does not usually spend his money wisely. Having suffered from limited means all his life, he rebounds to extremes of foolish extravagance, where the man who inherits his wealth would use it with less display. The sight of money being thrown away tends to increase class bitterness.

The man with a new fortune should not consider it wholly his own. He should look at it in part as the creation of a whole economic system, as something made possible by our favorable social and educational institutions, by the faithful labor of his subordinates. He should feel his indebtedness to the community in which his money is made. Let him give liberally of his new golden store for public causes and private charity, and he will have done much to establish it on a stable foundation.

Some New Ideas for Scenario Writers.

Have persons in secret conference drop important scrap of writing to be found by another person of treacherous character.

Have vampire let her hair down.

Have vampire struggle with man who holds her wrists and gives her a stern look.

Have grateful young woman say to hero, "How can I ever—It's just what one would say, don't you know."

New comedy idea. Have a funny man throw something at someone and miss him to hit somebody else.

Another one. Have a funny man real happy over something and all the time there's a cop or someone ready to pop him on the koke for it.

THE MAN FROM THE WEST.

Oh, the wild and woolly west. Where the men do things with zest; Where they promptly shoot a pest. In the wild and woolly west.

The man from the west strode into Googy's barber shop. Excepting for a slight, steady drizzle, the day was perfect.

"I want a haircut," he said. "I want a haircut, and no talkin'. See?" And he settled himself in the chair.

"Perhaps," began the man in the white coat, timidly.

"Hrooooo!" roared the man from the west, as he drew his double-barreled gun. "Did I say no talkin' didn't I? I've read all the papers and I don't want no news. Now get to work, with your scissors. Double-quick!"

With only a nervous sound in his throat by way of answer, the other obeyed, and the man from the west dropped off to sleep, the little barber shop shaking with his snoring. An accidental jab of the scissors in his right ear made him turn in his sleep, and the third jab in the same place woke him up. At the sight of his hair in the glass he started to his feet.

"So it's true, then, what the tenderfoot say!" he ejaculated. "You barbers don't cut hair unless you talk, eh?"

"I don't know, sir," apologized the man in the white coat. "You'd better wait till Mr. Googy comes back. I'm the baker from next door, sir."

Phoebe. Other brows are wilder. Fairer other necks: Somewhat finer features. Have more favored creatures Of her lovely sex.

Neither does she have the softest strands of hair. Though her lips are ruby, I won't swear them to be Quite beyond compare.

I should bear false witness If I said that she Had two eyes of blue there, Eyes that shone like fire Black as they can be!

Still would I avow it On the Holy Book. Though her brow is sable, She can set the table! My, but she can cook!

Happy Thought for Today. The faithful pamphlet, "How to get a butcher to sell you cheaper cuts of meat."

Happy Thought for Today. The cost of eggs and other luxuries continues to advance, but we may be thankful that inner tubes, victrola records and most necessities remain the same.

Do it Early. Dear little Bess! Her every cent On Mother Willie's gift she spent; Unselfish child! To think that she set Right out and bought the cutest tea set!

Another Servant Problem. "She's full of work?" asked Mr. D. I. Proud of Mrs. Proud. Who said, "I'm sure she ought to be. Cannot get it out!"

WHILE CHANGING REELS. Worry. Worry is the fear that we might not be properly frightened at some thing frightful if it happens. Worry is chiefly remarkable for its uselessness. A sunbonnet is useless in a submarine and so are hairpins in a trench. Both of them are indispensable compared to worry. A complete account of all of the worry that was ever useful could be written in a large, bold hand on the back of a waving stamp. There are two kinds of worry: Necessary and Unnecessary, and they are both alike. As an example of the uselessness of worry you may remember that you worried for two weeks over the doctor's bill. You thought he would soak you. So much worry wasted. He soaked you anyway. The best way to fight a worry is simply to stop it. Worry about something else.

After dancing a one-step with pretty Miss Fable, Fred found large pink smudges all over his shoulder. So he went and he panned a large sign on the girl and observed, with a chuckle, "I guess that'll hold her!"

NEWS NOTES—MOVIELAND

Marie Dore in "Oliver Twist." Dickens' best known and beloved book, as pictured will be released in the near future. Particular interest attaches itself to Marie Dore in the role of Oliver, as she played the role with great success on the stage.

Tully Marshall plays the role of Fagin and Hobart Bosworth is Bill Sykes. Nancy Sykes is played by Elsie Jane Wilson. Raymond Hatton also comes in for a prominent character role.

HELEN HAS A BABY. Helen Holmes is very proud of the tiny girl she has adopted. The adoption was no idle fad. She fell in love with the tot. The baby looks for her and howls with a pair of good lungs when she goes away, and Helen thinks she is a wonder. Already it hangs on to Helen's fingers and allows her to haul her well into the air, just a few months old, too.

Helen talks of the baby just as though she were a regular mamma. She makes a lovely mother, too.

EMOTION. Under stress of great emotion, whatever its cause, the tendency of a real human is to hold his breath and stand rigid.

That makes all the more absurd the habit of pet heroes in the movies to register strong emotion by working their chests like bellows.

Eileen Sedgwick, pretty ingenue of films, when Los Angeles was visited by a slight earthquake recently, was not alarmed. She thought it was her big brother, "Big Ed" Sedgwick, the 300-pound Fox comedian, walking around the kitchen.

The book and lyrics were written by David M. Wolf who has several of other Churchill (Inc. productions) to his credit, while the music is by Don Bestor who is best known for his score of "Dimple and Dollars."

The story is of the ever interesting period of life—youth—and carries an undercurrent of pathos not often found in a musical comedy.

A most elaborate scenic investiture is promised, while the wardrobe is said to be the most beautiful to be seen in a tabloid production.

The cast of funmakers is headed by Olivette Haynes and Henrietta Tedro, who are surrounded by the following well known cast:

Sonnie Zerk, William Hanson, Joe Cameron, Isaac Chapple, Daniel Langford, Emily Ruth Clark and the usual Church beautiful chorus.

MAJESTIC 7:30 and 9:00 TONIGHT The fascinating star Emmy Wehlen in Channing Pollock's great play The Pretenders a truly excellent picture.

That baseball salaries are up to stay is indicated by the top players made by colleges to veteran players to act as coach. Stars of five years ago in the major leagues didn't draw the money, players are being offered today to teach colleges how to play baseball. One big league player recently signed a five-year contract to coach a minor-league college isn't the biggest in America by any means. Exactly $25,000 is involved, the player being guaranteed a yearly salary of $5,000. In his best playing days he never received that much money, although he was one of the most valuable in his position in the country. Moreover, his season is comparatively short. Starts in January and ends in later part of June. He can draw another salary scouting for a major league outfit.

If you have a bad taste in your mouth, tongue coated, anise or poor, lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, troubled with undigested foods, you should take Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain.

"MAIDITIS" EPIDEMIC BREAKING OUT AMONG WOMEN IN ALL PLACES.

"K"

By Mary Roberts Rinehart

(Copyright, by McClure Publications, Inc.)

"Here, too, Miss Harrison?" he said. "Have they set you on my trail?"

With the eyes of the room on her, the girl answered primly:

"I'm to be in your office in the mornings, Doctor Wilson, and anywhere I am needed in the afternoons."

"And your vacation?"

"I shall take it when Miss Simpson comes back."

Although he went on at once with his conversation with the interne, he still heard the click of her heels about the room. He had not lost the fact that she had flushed when he spoke to her. The mischief that was latent in him came to the surface. When he had raised his hands, he followed her, carrying the towel to where she stood talking to the superintendent of the training school.

"Thanks very much, Miss Gregg," he said. "Everything went off nicely."

He was in a magnanimous mood. He smiled at Miss Gregg, who was elderly and gray, but visibly his creature.

"The sponge list, doctor."

He glanced over it, noting accurately sponges prepared, used, turned in. But he missed no gesture of the girl who stood beside Miss Gregg.

"All right," he returned the list. "That was a mighty pretty probationer I brought you yesterday."

"Two small frowning lines appeared between Miss Harrison's dark brows. He caught them, caught her somber eyes too, and was amused and rather stimulated.

"She is very young."

"Prefer 'em young," said Doctor Max. "Willing to learn at that age. You'll have to watch her, though. You'll have all the internes buzzing around, neglecting business."

Miss Gregg fluttered. She was divided between her disapproval of internes at all times and of young probationers generally, and her allegiance to the brilliant surgeon whose word was rapidly becoming law in the hospital. When an emergency of the cleaning-up called her away, doubt still in her eyes, Wilson was left alone with Miss Harrison.

"Tired?" He adopted the gentle, almost tender tone that made most women his slaves.

"A little. It is warty."

"Can't You Take a Little Ride To-night?"

"That are you going to do this evening? Any lectures?"

"Can't you take a little ride tonight and cool off? I'll have the car wherever you say. A ride and some supper—how does it sound? You could get away at seven."

"Miss Gregg is coming?"

With an impassive face, the girl turned away. The workers of the operating room surged between them. But he was clever with the guile of the pursuing male. Eyes of all on him, he turned at the door of the wardrobe room and spoke to her over the heads of a dozen nurses.

"That patient's address that I had forgotten, Miss Harrison, is the corner of the Park and Ellington avenue."

"Thank you."

She played the game well, was quite calm. He admired her coolness. Certainly, too, she was interested in him. He went whistling into the wardrobe room. As he turned he caught the interne's eye, and there passed between them a glance of complete comprehension. The interne grinned.

The room was not empty. His brother was there, listening to the comments of O'Hara, his friendly rival.

"Good work, boy!" said O'Hara, and clapped a hairy hand on his shoulder. "That last case was a wonder. I'm proud of you, and your brother here is indecently excited. It was the Edwardes method, wasn't it? I saw it done at his clinic in New York."

"Glad you liked it. Yes, Edwardes was a pul of mine in Berlin. A great surgeon, too, poor old chap!"

"There aren't three men in the country with the nerve and the hand for it," O'Hara went on, glowing with his own magnanimity. Doctor Ed stood by and waited while his brother got into his clothes. He was rather silent. There were many times when he wished that their mother could have lived to see how he had carried out his promise to "make a man of Max."

Sometimes he wondered what she would think of his own untidy methods compared with Max's extravagant order—of the bag, for instance, with the dog's collar in it, and other things. On these occasions he always determined to clear out the bag.

"I guess I'll be getting along," he said. "Will you be home for dinner?"

"I think not. I'll be going to run out of town, and eat where it's cool."

The Street was notoriously hot in summer.

"There's a roast of beef. It's a pity to cook a roast for one."

Wasteful, too, this cooking of food for two and only one to eat it. A roast of beef meant a visit, in Doctor Ed's modest-paying clientele. He still paid the expenses of the house on the Street.

"Sorry, old man; I've made another arrangement."

They left the hospital together. Everywhere the younger man received the homage of success. The elevator man bowed and flung the doors open, with a smile; the pharmacy clerk, the doorkeeper, even the convalescent patient who was polishing the great brass doorknobs, tendered their tribute. Doctor Ed looked neither to right nor left.

Sidney, after her involuntary bath in the river, had gone into temporary eclipse at the White Springs hotel. In the oven of the kitchen stove sat her two small white shoes, stuffed with paper so that they might dry in shape. Back in a detached laundry, a sympathetic maid was ironing various soft white garments, and slinging as she worked.

Sidney sat in a rocking chair in a hot bedroom. She was carefully swathed in a sheet from neck to toes, except for her arms, and she was being as philosophic as possible.

Someone tapped lightly at the door. "It's Le Moyne. Are you all right?"

"Perfectly. How stupid it must be for you!"

"I'm doing very well. The maid will soon be ready. What shall I order for supper?"

"Anything. I'm starving."

"I think your shoes have shrunk."

"Flatterer!" She laughed. "Go away and order supper. And I can see fresh lettuce. Shall we have a salad?"

K. Le Moyne stood for a moment in front of the closed door, for the mere sound of her moving, beyond it. Things had gone very far with the Pages' roomer that day in the country; not so far as they were to go, but far enough to let him see on the brink of what misery he stood.

He could not go away. He had promised her to stay; he was needed. He thought he could have endured seeing her marry Joe, had she cared for the boy. That way, at least, lay safety for her. The boy had fidelity and devotion written large over him. But this new complication—her romantic interest in Wilson, the surgeon's reciprocal interest in her, with what he knew of the man—made him quail.

From the top of the narrow staircase to the foot, and he had lived a year's torment! At the foot, however, he was startled out of his reverie. Joe Drummond stood, there waiting for him, his blue eyes recklessly alight.

"You—you dog!" said Joe.

There were people in the hotel parlor. Le Moyne took the frenzied boy by the elbow and led him past the door to the empty porch.

"Now," he said, "if you will keep your voice down, I'll listen to what you have to say."

"You know what I've got to say."

This failing to draw from K. Le Moyne anything but his steady glance, Joe jerked his arm free and clenched his fist.

"What did you bring her out here for?"

"I do not know that I owe you any explanation, but I am willing to give you one. I brought her out here for a trolley ride and a picnic luncheon."

He was sorry for the boy. Life not having been all beer and skittles to him, he knew that Joe was suffering, and was marvelously patient with him.

"Where is she now?"

"She had the misfortune to fall in the river. She is upstairs." And, seeing the light of unbelief in Joe's eyes: "If you care to make a tour of investigation, you will find that I am entirely truthful. In the laundry a maid—"

"She is engaged to me"—doggedly. "Everybody in the neighborhood knows it, and yet you bring her out here for a picnic! It's—it's damned rotten treatment."

His fist had unclenched. Before K. Le Moyne's eyes his own fell. He felt suddenly young and futile; his just rage turned to blustering in his ears.

"I don't know where you came from," he said, "but around here decent men cut out when a girl's engaged."

"I see."

"What's more, what do we know about you? You may be all right, but how do I know it? You get her into trouble and I'll kill you!"

It took courage, that speech, with K. Le Moyne towering five inches above him and growing a little white about the lips.

"Are you going to say all these things to Sidney?"

"I am. And I am going to find out why you were upstairs just now."

Perhaps never in his twenty-two years had young Drummond been so near a thrashing. Fury that he was ashamed of shook Le Moyne. For very fear of himself, he thrust his hands in the pockets of his Norfolk coat.

"Very well," he said. "You go to her with just one of these ugly insinuations, and I'll take mighty good care that you are sorry for it. If you are going to behave like a bud child, you deserve a licking, and I'll give it to you."

An overflow from the parlor poured out on the porch. Le Moyne had got himself in hand somewhat. He was still angry, but the look in Joe's eye startled him. He put a hand on the boy's shoulder.

"You're wrong, old man," he said. "You're insulting the girl you care for by the things you are thinking. And, if it's any comfort to you, I have no intention of interfering in any way. You can count me out. It's between you and her."

Joe picked his straw hat from a chair and stood turning it in his hands. "Even if you don't care for her, how do I know she isn't crazy about you?"

"My word of honor, she isn't."

"She sends you notes to McKees?"

"Just to clear the air, I'll show it to you. It's no breach of confidence. It's about the hospital."

Into the breast pocket of his coat he dived and brought up a wallet. The wallet had had a name on it in gilt letters that had been carefully scraped off. But Joe did not wait to see the note.

"Oh, damn the hospital!" he said—and went swiftly down the steps and into the gathering twilight of the June night.

"My Dear Sir: Your favor of the eighth inst., accompanied by your book, was duly received. I have read it very carefully. It seems to be a very good game, but I don't think it as good a game as bridge."

"Turned you down, did you say? Well, old chap, it's better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all."

"Yes, better, indeed," replied the rejected one. "Better for the post-office authorities, the florist, the dozen waiters, twice as many taxi drivers, the jeweler, and half the theaters in town!"

EDGERTON TURNS OUT FOR BIG FARMERS' GATHERING

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Edgerton, Dec. 15.—The farmers' and tobacco growers' meeting, which was held at the school house last evening, attracted an unusually large attendance. The exhibits displayed were characteristic of the fertile lands in this section. Don Kott, principal of the Sun Prairie high school, whose agricultural class took nearly $700 in prizes at the state fair last year, gave an address explaining the value being done in the locality and explained the possibilities of an agricultural course in a high school.

Prof. Oils of the University of Wisconsin gave a very pleasing and interesting address on "The Boy and Girl." The crowd would have undoubtedly been much larger had it not been for the extreme cold weather. Quite a number of exhibits arrived this morning so that the gym is filled with the best that is being grown in this territory. The music was furnished by the high school orchestra and quartet, which were well received.

Arrangements have been made whereby the George Doty store will be used as headquarters for the community. Clothing or food-stuffs can leave same at the store any time beginning Saturday morning.

The store will be in charge of the ladies of the Federation of Women's Clubs and any information desired by any one in regard to the donations or progress of the work can be had by calling at the store.

THE HOLY CITY.

As the Bible stands apart from other books, Revelation stands apart from the rest of the Bible. It is singular, difficult, mysterious. It has been said extravagantly that it either finds a man insane or leaves him so. It has been called the cross of crosses of commentators. One instantly loses himself in the labyrinth of variant interpretations. It seems best not to attempt to make direct verbal application of the contents to events past, present, or future.

On the whole, the book is a prophetic-poetic chain of allegories—an album of vivid pictures—the whole intent of which is to create, feed, and shelter hope of the ultimate and practically universal dominion of the good, in spite of transitory reverses and lapses.

In the material emblem of a city, adorned and beautified, the spiritual betterment of humanity seems to be shadowed. As the plan and fashion of the city is from heaven, so the ideals of right human living are divine. As these ideals are realized, and in the proportion that they are realized, God lives with and in men.

In the ratio of righteousness (right living) to evil, the city grows. Right living (the) is the sole cause of tears, pain, death, sorrow and crying.

In this apocalyptic city, John sees no temple. A temple is a reminder of an absent deity. God's presence makes a material structure in his honor unnecessary. Yet this presence need not be external and additional to the moral and spiritual qualities which are the souls of men.

To use Tolstoy's phrase, "Where love is, God is." In this renewed earth, sun and moon will not be quenched; but the earthly radiance of right-living will outshine them. Whole nations, with their rulers, will keep walking in this light, which never shone on land or sea. This good life is not difficult of access. It requires no toilsome pilgrimage. It is at hand. It is like a four-square city, with ever-open gates on every side. So he who makes right-living hard and laborious is aside from the description of the revelator.

Some one suggests that the change of figure is significant. It is no longer a mere paradise or garden. Now it is a city of God on earth, statelier and more glorious, but at the same time a rest of human cooperation with the Divine. Man building after God's plans and specifications.

This is the holy dream of the thousand years, the millennial reign, which has been the soul and inspiration of the saints in all ages—an indefinitely long period, in which there shall be substantially universal righteousness (right living) and its concomitants, universal peace and universal joy.

Here, however, is no static condition, no fixity. Here is rest; but it is the rest attendant upon a steady, unwearying advancement. There is an infinite progression. First in apprehension of the riches, both of the wisdom and knowledge of God. Then in goodness, until the fruits of the Spirit appear and come to perfection. Finally in serviceableness, until the Master's rule of life becomes the disciple's—"Not to be ministered unto, but to minister and give."

THE TEACHER'S LANTERN.

Out on the statial heaven! Eternally resting on the banks of the river! It would be purgatory to the saint, aspiring, capable soul. Wash, think and do, and do, but without the handicaps of the present.

Current views of the life of heaven are far too rigid. Congregations never breaking up and Sabbaths never ending.

It seems best to think of the heavenly life as like one lived in this world, when it shall have been renovated by the advent of the millennial kingdom. We shall just be and do and live in an absolutely natural and human way.

The millennial kingdom comes not as a cataclysm. It is rather like yeast in dough; steadily, imperceptibly spreading out and up, till the whole mass is lifted.

In the ultimate analysis, the New Jerusalem is, after all, not a city at all; but a people, renewed and adorned with gifts, grace, and usefulness.

The jeweled walls, golden streets, river, tree, and all, are material emblems of the moral and spiritual qualities of a redeemed humanity.

Mathematical computations of the time of the advent of the millennial kingdom are the "great lost labor," that chronic malady of apocalyptic exegesis.

Lange says the apocalypse will not be fully comprehended until we see it in the light of the millennium. Herder calls it an abstract of almost all prophets and apostles. To handle it as if it were a book of literal meanings is manifestly an unreasonable procedure.

Goethe says: "I am a man of the earth, earthly. To me the parables of the unjust steward, the prodigal son, the sower, the pearl, the lost piece of money, are more divine than the seven messengers, candlesticks, seals, stars, and woes."—Letters to Lavater.

It is a child-notion that reformatory progress is necessarily attendant with cataclysms. The old fable of the wind and the sun contending for the traveler's coat is pertinent. Silent forces, both natural and moral, are at work.

Wars and earthquakes are never the signs of the end. This kingdom does not come noisily. Salt and yeast are symbols of it.

The "New Earth" of the millennium is not built upon the old earth annihilated. It is the old rehabilitated, transfused and transfigured, adorned like a bride, not with gems of material substance however, but with the only jewels that delight the Lord's eye.

The Lord himself is temple of the new earth. That suggests the evangelical character of the church.

BIG JOBS AWAITING US.

There is still a burning bush in every man's way however obscure a man may be in his own person or however lowly his way may be.

Out of that bush the same ineffable and imperious voice that called Moses calls him. The legendary bush is the real environment of the men of today.

Devout and intelligent survey of one's own environment, its demands and possibilities, make the voice of God in the soul calling for the supply of those demands and the realizing of those possibilities. The call will never be in excess of a man's ability. If a man in any instance feels himself commissioned for something palpably beyond his talents he has not read the case correctly.

One's environment may call not for some aggressive deed of valor, but what might be considered the negative grace, say for example that of patience. If that be so one may rest assured that it will be just as acceptable to God and valuable to the world as any conspicuous deed crowning the deer with high renown.

AFTER FIGHTING FOR ENGLAND FOR FIFTY FIVE YEARS, IS REGISTERED AS ALIEN

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

London, Dec. 15.—Otto Silvester, an American, former rough-rider in Buffalo Bill's shows, and British army veteran of more than fifteen years' service was registered here today as an alien despite his heroic service in three wars.

The same court that ordered the American adventurer to register also held him to be re-examined for military service.

Silvester suffered three serious wounds, numerous minor injuries and was discharged in time to go into action on the Western front. After being wounded in the head at La Basse he spent many weeks in a hospital but was discharged in time to go into action at Neuve Chapelle. In a battle there the former cowboy was hit in the right arm and left shoulder and blinded by an explosion.

Discharged and sent back to England Silvester recovered his sight and gradually regained his strength sufficiently to work on munitions in fane of the big plants some distance from London. But a fellow workman became suspicious of the ex-soldier and asked the authorities why he was not registered as an alien. Silvester was promptly summoned.

Silvester's daring exploits recorded to his credit in the annals of the Western front, scarcely exceed his achievements during the South African war. It was Silvester, who carried the dispatch that meant life or death, from beleaguered Ladysmith to General Buller at Colenso. And riding with the head of the relief column the same Yank was one of the first to re-enter the town. During the same campaign he was wounded in the leg fighting at Nicholson's Nek but he still had enough scrap in his makeup to go through a number of desperate battles on the Indian frontier.

The medical examiners will decide whether the "alien" is fit for further military service.

$20,000,000 BOOST

TO STEEL WORKERS; THOUSANDS PROFIT

Ten Per Cent Wage Increase of Corporation Effective Today.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

New York, Dec. 15.—What is perhaps the biggest wage increase in the history of the United States becomes effective today when the pay of 260,000 workers of the United States Steel corporation is increased ten per cent—the gross annual increase amounting $20,000,000. The increase was made by the company due to its enormous prosperity—its net earnings are now estimated at $1,000,000 a day.

The increase is but one of many recently made by large employing concerns throughout the country.

Among them are:

Ten per cent increase to 35,000 employees of the American Woolen company, Boston.

Ten per cent increase to the 33,000 employees of the Cotton Manufacturers association of New Bedford.

Thirty-five to forty per cent increase to the 3,000 persons employed by the American Clothing Manufacturers association, New York, (effective December 18).

Ten per cent increase to the 3,000 employees of the National India Rubber company, Bristol, R. I.

Ten per cent increase to the 3,000 men employed by independent steel mills at and near Sharon, Pa.

Increase of not less than 25 cents a day to the 10,000 employees of the Bayonne, Elizabeth and Clarendon refineries of the Standard Oil company (action taken after a strike for higher wages at Bayonne in which several persons were shot to death).

The City of New York contemplates a wage increase of $1,147.18 to 18,387 municipal employees. This had not been determined finally.

In each case, in announcing the increases, the concerns said they were made to enable their employees to meet the advancing cost of living.

H. Gary, chairman of the Steel corporation said: "Ordinarily the question of wages would not come up for consideration or decision at this time of the year, but in consequence of the abnormal conditions now existing it has been decided to increase the wage rates of our iron and steel companies about ten per cent, effective December 15. As to the other departments, increases will be equitably proportioned."

The increase is the third the company has made during the year. Its payroll for 1915 was $176,800,864, the 1916 total will be above $200,000,000 and if high wages continue the 1917 roll will approach $250,000,000.

The Eastman Kodak company of Rochester, N. Y., the Globe Manufacturers association of Gloversville, N. Y., and the Arlington Mills of Lawrence, Mass., are other concerns which have made substantial wage increases.

That lesser concerns have taken similar action is indicated by Chicago figures, where, according to John W. O'Leary, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, twenty-five concerns have made $10,000,000 in increases to 100,000 employees during the year.

To Prevent Old Age Coming Too Soon!

(By L. W. Bower, M. D.)

Toxic poisons in the blood are thrown out by the kidneys. The kidneys act as filters for such products.

If we wish to prevent old age coming too soon and increase our chances for a long life, we should drink plenty of pure water and take a little Anuric.

When suffering from backache, frequent or scanty urine, rheumatic pains here or there, or that constant tired, worn-out feeling, the simple way to overcome these disorders is merely to obtain a little Anuric from your nearest druggist and notice the grand results. You will find it many times more potent than lithia, and that it dissolves uric acid as hot water does sugar.

LARGE CROWD HEARS COMMUNITY SPEAKERS

ber; its sphere of activity is in the entire community, not merely within the corporate limits of the city, nor within the immediate part of the county lying nearest to Janesville, but the entire community. And through this organization we are attempting to work out a spirit of co-operation that will be felt throughout all the community.

"Its lines of endeavor have been many; its sole purpose is not, as many people are inclined to believe, to bring new factories to Janesville. The big thing it is trying to accomplish and the spirit that moves all its various activities, is to cement all the elements of the community into one co-operative family. We want to bring the farmer so close to Janesville that we will do away with the mail-order house.

"Among the other activities that the Commercial club took up for the advancement of the interests of all members of the community, Mr. Mount mentioned such things as the promotion of public improvement, and mentioned as evidences of the work along this line the new lights, the removal of the poles from the downtown streets, the good roads campaigns and contests.

"The more we do for any member of this whole community the more we do for ourselves right here in Janesville; that in itself would be sufficient reason for the Commercial club's work in the rural districts in the improving of school grounds, the conduct of corn contests, and the organization of breeders' clubs.

"Of course another part of our work, and indeed a large one, is the bringing of new industries to Janesville and the aiding of the work here which need assistance and which are worthy of it. Much of this work is investigation, and the public would be surprised at the number of factories and industries that have been found here which have been found insecure. Ninety-five percent of all industries started are failures; so far Janesville has been most fortunate in keeping ahead with only the five percent class of success and we want to stay there."

In conclusion Mr. Mount declared that the club welcomed criticism of the constructive kind, and that more than anything else the club wanted the co-operation of all the people and the desire to help it wherever possible.

T. N. Wilton won the attention of his audience at the time with his simple, unassuming style of address and his very evident sincerity and love of his own community at Trenton, Missouri, for which he has done so much. His talk was a recital of personal experiences and observations, and of logical conclusions he had drawn from these facts.

"I had not been in business for so very long," he began, "before I realized that there was something more in life than merely dollars and cents, and that it was the little things that one does to help other people that make real happiness and satisfaction with one's work. This spirit of co-operation of which we hear so much is not some vague unobtainable thing, but in every community lies just beneath the surface and in waiting to be brought out by the little kindnesses of some individual or group.

"All the improvements here in Janesville, all its industries, and the reputation it has made for itself are but the reflection of the character of its citizens. People do not really know their own communities, and because of this they criticize blindly. Know your own city; pry into things a bit, and you will not complain.

"Too often the trouble with a community, the feeling that keeps various parts not only from co-operation, but at actual swords' points, is the feeling on the part of the business man that he is better than the farmer; that there is a vast difference between them. That is the feeling that we want to do away with, and must overcome before we get the real community of interests that makes the success of the city. A town is not built for people to make money in; it is built to serve the people; a merchant or a business man, or a banker, or what not is not established in a town to make money; he is there to serve the people. All enterprises are to serve the community and we are all under obligation to serve it. A man or a unit of a community that works merely for itself is not making a success; real success comes when we are working for the interests and good of all. Every man should have at least two jobs: what he would naturally call his own work and that which he does in the service of the community, the betterment of the community.

"Of course his duty is first to his home; but just what does that mean? When he is away from home, as the hedges are in the large house on such and such a street, but he calls home the town he comes from. As the increase of the perspective has changed his conception of home, so it should also enlarge his sphere of duty.

"Any of these improvements are easy when we all realize that we owe the same thing to the community, when we get the boy and the girl and the clubs and the women's circles pushing together for the good of all, any innovation is easy to bring about.

"We are all different in nature, but we all have the same essential interests. But the realization of this fact takes time; constructive work is slow to progress; campaigns of enlightenment and improvement are beset with many delays.

"We want no imaginary line separating one part of the community from another; a city limit should make no difference in the work or our conceptions of the people on either side of it. What difference does it make if a man walks five blocks to do his buying or drives five miles for the same thing? A city limit merely be the center of the community, its center of trade, of religion, of culture, education and of business. Other than that we should not think of the country as being different from the city; we don't want the two classifications of the farmer and the business man of the city, but should have the classification of the farmer into one group as the banker or the doctor or the grocer is put each in a group by himself. The farmer is no more different from the banker than the grocer, for instance, and the sooner we all realize this and we all work for the same end, the sooner will we be in a position to get what we want in a community for the community.

"If you want something don't be afraid of it. Go after it in an easy, common sense way. Don't worry about the big things at the outset; get the straight of all co-operating on the little things and you will form a habit of co-operation that will eventually be strong enough to put over the big job.

"Each one of you will fall in love with the work the first time you do something for your neighbor, for the community. You will get the community spirit in spite of yourself, and will work ever harder and with a greater understanding of the task before you. Look for the good things, not for the bad, and you will never have to be a knacker. Don't condemn every movement you see started in a community; some things may look very small, but you cannot always tell from where good is to be derived. Boast every chance you get, do something every day, and do it with a good will, and remember that you are working for the good of all and owe your services to the whole community, and then and then only, will the community grow along those lines which bring all its elements closer at every step."

"Y" TO ENTERTAIN ON NEW YEAR'S DAY

Officers of Association Invite All Residents of the City to Attend Celebration.

As the feature of the holiday entertainments to be given at the local Y. M. C. A., members of the staff of officers are planning a New Year's day celebration that will continue from morning throughout the day. The event will give each department of the association an opportunity to put on some stunt, and is so arranged that it will be possible for everyone to attend at some time during the day. The affair is not for members alone, but is planned for the general public as well. Secretary Bearmore and his assistants issue a cordial invitation to all to be present with them on New Year's day.

While definite plans for the day's entertainment have not been perfected, each department is arranging a part in the program. It is probable that the Boy Scouts will put on some exhibition work and competitive drills during the morning. Throughout the day they will serve as guides in conducting parties on inspection trips about the "Y" building. From three o'clock until about four there will be a program of stunts by the juniors; from four until five an entertainment given by a group of young people from the various churches of the city. After this refreshments, and in the evening an entertainment by the older members of the association, and other groups of young people from various organizations of the city.

More definite announcement of the stunts will be made later, but the directors of the association want everyone to set aside a part of New Year's day for the "Y."

HIGH SCHOOL WILL CELEBRATE TUESDAY

Entertaining Program and Christmas Tree Planned for High School Students Next Tuesday.

In celebration of the close of school for Christmas recess, and also as the school's part in observing Christmas, an afternoon of entertainment is planned at the high school for next Tuesday afternoon, at which a Christmas program will be given by various school organizations and a Christmas tree will be covered with presents for distribution to each student and member of the faculty.

The event has been customary in the past, but those in charge this year believe that it will be even more of a success than it has been in preceding years. Each student has brought a present to be given to some other; these are distributed by Santa Claus with the assistance of nine fairies and nine elves, impersonated by members of the freshman class.

The program for the afternoon, as arranged by Miss Donnelly, will commence at half past two: Overture—High School Orchestra. Vocal Duet—Wilmarth Davidson and Robert Stevens.

Christmas Carols—Girls' Glee Club.
Cornet Solo—Roy Keller.
Reading—Constance Cunningham.
Violin Solo—Gretchen Frick.
Sketch—Paul Leslie and Paul Richards.
Musical Number—Boys' Glee Club.
Folk Dance—By twelve members of Miss Buckmaster's kindergarten.
High School Orchestra.
Christmas Tree—Presents for All.
